"PINK-EYE."

A TOUR AROUND THE CITY STABLES.

The Disease Attacks the Horses Here, but in a Milder Form Than Elsewhere—The Treatment Resorted To—What Stables of the Livery Men Say.

"Pink-eye," the new horse disease, has thus far appeared in a much milder form in this city than in others, as, for instance, in Baltimore, where one of the street railway lines, usually running cars every fifteen minutes, now runs only every fifteen, owing to the severity of the attack upon its stables. In order to ascertain the extent of the disease here, a REPUBLICAN reporter paid a visit yesterday afternoon to a large number of stables in quest of suffering equines.

BELT LINE STABLES.

Visiting the stables of the Belt Line, on Third street and Maryland avenue, THE REPUBLICAN'S Inspector found Superintendent Lee Barnes engaged in his after-dinner rest.

"We had escaped this trouble until the 10th instant," he replied to the query how the line was affected by the disease, and I began to hope that we would not have any of it at all. I ascribe the fact of our horses being but lately, and considering the small number and fair condition of the stock animals, so slightly affected, to the healthy and clean condition of the stables and the general good treatment of our stock, both by the drivers and at the stable. Only one horse suffered very much from the disease."

"What treatment did you resort to?" asked the inquisitive scribbler.

"Well, it is an altogether new complication, and I had to fall back upon my knowledge of veterinary surgery to ease the horse as far as possible. I kept his head open, fed him on soaked feed, and administered his condition carefully every day, and succeeded in bringing him around nicely, so that he will be over it in a very short time. I hope we will have no further trouble with the disease."

J. T. FRICK & SONS

were next visited. "It first appeared three weeks ago in our stables," Mr. Frick remarked, "and all our horses were affected. I had the stables washed and gave the animals my condition powder, which was very much improved. I have had no further trouble since. Eight or ten are still on the sick-list. I think the trouble has just begun, and that it will spread to all our stables."

AT FURBER'S STABLES.

On C street, near the National Hotel, the disease has been spreading since the 10th instant, and a veterinary surgeon is attending to the diseased animals, which seem to recover in the same order in which they became sick. Mr. Furber says that the disease is a rather light one, and that the horses are recovering very much more rapidly than he expected. He believes the general duration of the disease to be about nine days, and ascribes it partly to the warm weather of the last few days.

FAMILY & BROS.

on Eighth street, said that all their horses were free from the disease. "I, however, fed their animals as a precautionary measure on soft feed, and watch them very carefully."

J. KLEBER & SONS

also report their stables unaffected. Mr. Kleber claimed that this was due to the good ventilation of the stables, and to the fact that the animals were not crowded together.

"Alderman's Daily Wagon."

had some horses affected by pink-eye about three weeks ago, and about twenty of their animals have since been under medical treatment. All affected horses recovered. Stables cleaned. Cleaning stables report no cases.

MR. J. H. GREENE

Seventh and G streets, said that the first horse in his stables became affected about three weeks ago, and had a very severe attack of the disease. Since then about twenty other animals have been affected, but all have recovered. He expects that all his horses will be well by the end of the month.

THE AVENUE LINE

at the Georgetown stables stated that he has had horses falling sick and getting well all along since the disease first appeared. He has had about twenty horses affected, but all have recovered. He expects that all his horses will be well by the end of the month.

REAL-ESTATE CHAT.

A Demand for a Good Class of Houses—A Review of Interviews.

There is a great demand for rooms and houses in the city this fall, and their supply is by no means adequate to the demand. Real-estate dealers say that the demand is almost unprecedented, and that they have never before had so many inquiries for small houses and rooms. The demand is not only for small houses and rooms, but for a good class of houses. People who have the means to do so are looking for a good class of houses, and they are willing to pay a high price for them. Real-estate dealers are giving up the idea of a low price for a good class of houses, and are now offering them at a high price. This is a sign of a great demand for a good class of houses, and it is a sign that the city is becoming a more desirable place to live in.

One prominent dealer said on Saturday that during the past season but few rows of houses were put up, while the number of people who want to go to the city is increasing. He said that the demand is not only for small houses and rooms, but for a good class of houses. People who have the means to do so are looking for a good class of houses, and they are willing to pay a high price for them.
